

Thank you for visiting us!

St. George Village Botanical Garden is dedicated to the conservation and preservation of both the historical 19th century Danish sugar cane plantation and living collections including over 1500 native and exotic species and varieties on its grounds.

Our mission is to conserve the native plant species of St. Croix, as well as threatened species of other Caribbean islands suited to local environmental conditions. In addition, the Garden preserves the ethno-botanical history of St. Croix through living, graphic and structural displays.

Through its gardens and collections, it is a center of education for better understanding, not only of the island's botanical heritage, but also the horticultural potential for contemporary gardening in the Virgin Islands.
